

Professor Garfield

Fact Or Opinion App

Learn about facts and opinions on the internet

The Professor Garfield apps are wonderful for teaching students about online safety and digital citizenship. In this engaging app, students read the comic in which Nermal learns about facts and opinions after getting a bad grade on a report. Along the way he also learns about how some websites can be misleading, and how to verify information he finds online. In addition to the comic, there are also several interactive features that give students the chance to apply and practice what they have learned. The app teaches about key skills for finding factual information on the internet.

Classroom Connection

What a great app for a unit on internet safety that includes a language arts component. Have students play through the app, then explore websites as a class and practice determining whether the information on them is reliable or not.
